

Hannah Poquette is a Data Fellow with the Strategic Data Project out of the Graduate School of Education located at Harvard University. Hannah works as a Strategic Data Analyst in the Commissioner's Delivery Unit at the Kentucky Department of Education. Prior to the fellowship, Hannah was an English teacher in the Milwaukee Metro area. Her work included designing and launching a new literacy course for struggling readers and assisting in the development of new literacy and writing assessment processes at the secondary school level. Her interest in education stems from her career teaching underserved students as well as her graduate school research on Education in Emergencies. Hannah earned a Master of International Affairs in Human Rights and Humanitarian Policy from Columbia University's School of International and Public Affairs.

