

Aaron Butler is a research analyst at the Kentucky Department of Education. Prior to joining KDE, Aaron was a research associate at the Center for Evaluation and Education Policy and the Center for Survey Research at Indiana University. His work consisted of evaluating education programs and activities funding by Title VI, analyzing school effectiveness models for the Georgia Department of Education's Charter School Division, and assisting in the implementation of large-scale surveys such as the National Survey of Student Engagement. Before working at Indiana University, Aaron was the Director of Education at the Fort Wayne Philharmonic where he oversaw the development and implementation of over 300 concerts and 24 education and outreach programs annually. Previously, Aaron was a middle school teacher in New York City and Takaoka, Japan. He earned a Bachelor of Music from the University of British Columbia, a Masters in Science in Secondary Education from Pace University, and a Master's in Business Administration from Indiana University. Aaron is currently finishing his PhD in education policy studies from Indiana University.

