

Alex Spurrier

Biography

Alex Spurrier is a Strategic Research Analyst at the Kentucky Department of Education, where his work is focused on improving organizational decision-making through data analysis. He is currently a fellow with the Strategic Data Project, an initiative of the Center for Education Policy Research at Harvard University. He earned his MA in Public Policy at Trinity College (Hartford, CT) and his BA in Economics from Bethel University (St. Paul, MN).

Session Title

What is Quality Education?

What do we mean when we talk about providing students with a "quality" education? How will our view of "quality" change in the future? This talk will define the the current state of educational quality in Kentucky through the prism of achievement, equity, and integrity. The future of education quality will be discussed in the context of the rise of automation in our economy and the demands it will place on our educational system.